Marx and the Working Class

Mike Davis

Thursdays, 8:00

10 weeks, $10.00

A historical survey of the lives and works of Karl Marx and Frederick Engels. We will examine how scientific socialism developed in the crucible of 19th century class struggles, from the earliest workers' uprisings to the formation of mass socialist parties. One week will be specifically devoted to Marx' and Engels' writings on the U.S. working class. (This course is recommended as an introduction for more advanced study.)

The Revolutionary Party: Theory and Practice

Dorothy Healey

Alternate Saturdays, 1:00

(March 12, 16; April 9, 23; May 7)

5 weeks, $5.00

What is the role of the revolutionary party in the U.S. today? This course will look at different theories of party organization in relation to the specific political and cultural traditions of the U.S. working class. In particular it will focus on the relevance of the Leninist model to the contemporary struggle. (Prior knowledge of Marxist literature or practice required.)

Soapbox '77

Sarah Bliet

Tuesdays, 8:00

10 weeks, $10.00

The medium may not be the message, but if we can't get our ideas across to others we're in big trouble. Enunciation—projection—stressing points—modulation—all secrets will be revealed. From soapboxes to debates to coliseum-size speeches, this course should really help.
